Reality TV may seem like a new concept, although it has been around for many years. One example of reality TV is a show called Big Brother. This has been shown in the U.K for over ten years. It shows strangers living together within a single household for over two months. It is a programme with no script, however it has been criticised for becoming extreme in order to entertain the public. So are reality TV shows really real? Or have they been manipulated to suit corporate viewing figures?
